Booster Week Starts In Great Auto Contest

An Encouragement Offer Made Public in Order to Stimulate an Early Start in Race.

By T. K. Greer.

Join the "Boosters" in The Republican's Automobile Contest as this will be "Booster Week."

This announcement is one of utmost importance to all contestants as it means that 15,000 extra votes will be given in addition to the regular schedule for every subscription turned in during this period. This is one of the good offers and all are assured that never again during this contest will as many votes be issued for a single subscription. Contestants are therefore urged to get every possible subscription and turn it in during "Booster Week." It will require but little figuring to see the large number of votes that can be secured during this offer.

All subscriptions turned in to date will also be credited with the extra votes.

"Booster Week" will continue until 8:30 p. m. Wednesday, October 11.

The offer is made to encourage an early start among the candidates for the prizes. The management believes in putting the best offers at the beginning of the contest instead of at the end, and the wise contestant will do most of the work as early in the game as possible. For the next six days an extra certificate calling for 15,000 votes will be issued for every subscription old or new, turned in for The Republican. Send in your subscriptions frequently as it greatly aids the contest manager. There is nothing to be gained by holding them.

This is simply an offer of encouragement, and will expire Wednesday, October 11, at 8.30 p. m. So it behooves you to immediately get busy and see how many of these extra votes you can secure during this short week. The ballots do not have to be counted at once, but may be held and voted at will.

Contest Just Starting.

The big contest is just swinging into its proper stride. Candidates are beginning to realize something of its size and the detail involved in handling the business. The contest department is making every effort to answer all inquiries promptly and to the point and ask contestants to read the rules carefully before rushing off a letter about some minor point that is fully covered.

All Subscriptions Count.

All subscriptions, old or new, have a vote value. Some of the contestants do not clearly understand this and it was thought wise to explain. Any person now a subscriber to The Republican can benefit a contestant by either paying arrearages or advancing a subscription. Each dollar turned in will count as one year. New subscribers can be secured for any period from one to ten years and old subscribers can pay ten years in advance if they desire.

Every Subscriber Should Vote.

Every subscriber of The Republican should give his votes to some candidate. Send in your favorite's name and then vote. Vote just as you would for a congressman to represent you, only vote oftener, as it is perfectly safe, and the oftener you vote the more sure your candidate is to be a winner.

Your help may be just what is needed to encourage your favorite to do the work which will place a candidate at the top of the list.

Every subscription to the Republican this week means an extra 15,000 votes for your favorite candidate.

A Word to Candidates.

Candidates are asked to remember that when they turn in a subscription they are not at that time given credit for the votes in the published list. But certificates good for the number of votes to which they are entitled to for each subscription are mailed or given to them. These certificates are to be held until the candidates desire to increase their score in the paper. So, when an error is apparent in a published score, do not include any votes to which you are entitled on subscriptions, unless you have first received the certificate from this office and then voted it. This will save lots of correspondence.

Out of town contestants should bear in mind that it usually takes the contest department a few days to get votes to you after the subscriptions have been mailed in. Every subscription must go through a certain prescribed course. No variation can be made.

And naturally the subscription is the most valuable. The subscription vote outweighs the coupon which appears in each issue of The Republican. As an instance of this the extra vote offer of this week may be cited.

All Have Equal Show.

It makes no difference where a candidate resides, the chances are exactly the same for winning the automobile.

If you desire to be a winner, you must not neglect this offer. "Tis the early bird that catches the worm." And such is the case here. The contestant who takes advantage of this offer will be the winner. Show your friends where they can help you more this week than at any other time of the contest, then urge them to take out a subscription. Now is the time—so get busy.

To Outside Candidates.

You will have until 8.30 p. m. Wednesday to mail in your subscriptions so they will count for the "Booster" week. Any letter mailed before 8.30 p. m. Wednesday will count. Ask the postmaster when he changes his date stamp, then be sure you get your letter in on time.

Call For Letters.

Have you obtained any of the letters that we furnish the contestants to send to their friends? If not, why not? You would indeed be surprised if you only knew how readily your friends will respond when called on.

Now is the time to use them. If you have not already obtained a supply, call and get a bunch.

Room For New Entries.

There is still plenty of room for new candidates, as daily some drop out and others take their places. In some districts especially there are up to the present time, so few candidates that a prize in one of these sections is a certainty. It will appeal to anyone with a little ambition to see that they can enter in an almost open field and have the best kind of a chance at a fine prize.

Just Getting Started.

At present the candidates are just getting started, feeling the pulse of their friends to learn their strength. They know that subscriptions are what count, and that to secure them is the surest way to pile up votes, though the daily coupons are by no means to be despised, as the winning of a prize sometimes depends on a few votes. Get your friends into the habit of cutting coupons out for you and it will keep up their interest in you. Later they will not let their favorite candidate fall behind for lack of the support they can give.

Things To Remember.

Have you joined the "boosters?"

It is time to get busy if you expect to have some real fun out of the Republican's Automobile Contest.

If you belong to a church, let your friends know you are running.

Anyone, anywhere can vote for any candidate. If you have a friend you wish to vote for, who has not yet been nominated, send in your votes and fill out the nomination blank printed in The Republican. This nomination blank counts 1,000 votes to start with.

No extra papers will be printed for sale of coupons contained therein.

If you have any complaints to make, kindly send same to the Contest Manager, Republican, Bellefonte, Pa. We want everybody satisfied.

Save your coupons and see that your subscriptions are paid and the votes given to your favorite. Don't lose any time in seeking your friends and getting them to subscribe for The Republican and cast their votes for your candidate.

A little organization among your friends for systematic work in your favor will go a long ways toward making you successful.

Don't knock the other candidates. Remember the "Golden Rule."

Don't forget that the children can do the most effective work in collecting coupons. Every little bit helps.

Should your father, brother or friends belong to any organization, get them to work for you.

Do not let a day pass without securing a subscription. Success is the reward of persistency.

Enlist the interest of your friends and friend's friend.

Use your telephone.

Hundreds of people have no personal friends in this contest.

They are friends of your friends or of your friends' friends. If you have your

A WINNING AND PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

Republicans of Centre County are to be congratulated upon the wisdom they displayed at the primaries on Saturday, for the ticket they nominated is a winner. Selected as it was, with no semblance of a slate or dictation by so-called leaders and representing the sentiment of the Republican voters of the county, the ticket is one which meets with full approval and inspires confidence upon all sides.

Not all of the Republican aspirants for honors could be nominated. Of necessity the result at the primaries was attended with disappointment for those failing to land as winners. Nevertheless, every aspirant put up a splendid contest and the disappointment of those who failed to win was more than over-balanced by the knowledge that they had made a good fight and that it was an honor to be defeated by worthy rivals.

Every Republican aspirant at Saturday's primaries received a square deal. All stood upon a common ground, for their nomination or defeat, as the case was to be, rested solely with the rank and file of Republicans. With such conditions governing the Republican primaries, we have no hesitancy in saying that it is the duty of every unsuccessful aspirant to give to the ticket the same hearty and enthusiastic support he would have expected had he himself been nominated. Clean, friendly rivalry is a wholesome thing for the party. At the primaries it is the privilege of one and all to aspire to nomination. Having entered the primaries and submitted their candidacy to the people, we assert that it is the duty of the defeated candidates to turn in for the ones nominated. We congratulate the several defeated candidates upon their manliness in accepting the decision of the Republican voters with such good grace, for it is this spirit which means a united party, and a united party means victory in November.

Since the primaries certain Democrats have been busily engaged in attempting to poison the minds of some of the defeated Republican candidates. We have a too high regard for the good sense and judgment of the latter to believe for a moment that any one of them could so easily be influenced and led into a step which he would live to regret.

On the Republican side interest at the primaries seemed to center upon the nomination of the two candidates for County Commissioners. Commissioners Woodring and Zimmerman won a renomination and with handsome pluralities. They won because the Republicans of Centre County were not only desirous of rewarding them for honest, faithful service, but because they were unwilling to destroy the time-honored custom of according such officials a second term. Messrs. Miller, Decker and Richards, in becoming candidates for County Commissioners, exercised a privilege open to any citizen. Each made a creditable showing and each demonstrated that he has many warm friends. Each will no doubt do his utmost to have these same friends lend a helping hand to the nominees, Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman. The victory of the Republican members of the present board of County Commissioners is one that forecasts a second victory in November. For their renomination is stamped with the approval of Republicans who stand for progress and advancement, it is stamped with the approval of taxpayers who believe that it is the part of wisdom to safeguard and preserve the public's property. The petty fault-finder who went stalking through the county, predicting the repudiation and defeat of Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman clearly misjudged the intelligence of our citizens. They could not, or would not, see that a dollar honestly spent to preserve many dollars' worth of public property was a dollar well spent. Being themselves narrow on this point they foolishly believed that all of our citizens were equally narrow and foolish. To these few persons, and to these, only, was the renomination of Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman a surprise. Friend and foe, alike, frankly conceded Mr. Woodring and Mr. Zimmerman to be rigidly honest, to be men of honor and integrity and to be public officials with the courage to do their duty without first halting to learn whether their acts might meet with popular favor.

Had Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman gone down to defeat theirs would have been a defeat attended with no disgrace. In the language of Judge Orvis, who happens to be a Democrat, the acts of Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman will ever stand as a monument and their names will ever live as men of progress and advancement. "The Republican" cordially and sincerely indorses this tribute to two of the best officials ever elected in Centre County. And in saying this it is our firm conviction that all thinking men, all citizens who have their earnings and savings invested in Centre County, will welcome the opportunity to vote for Messrs. Woodring and Zimmerman in November and accord them a re-election by an overwhelming majority.

Heading the Republican ticket as the nominee for Sheriff is George H. Yarnell, of Zion, a clean-cut young man who knows nothing but the religion of honesty and strict attention to business, of fair and square dealing as between man and man. When a man is held in esteem by his employers it is a testimonial to his worth. When the same man is held in the same high regard by those who have been in his employ it must be accepted as evidence that he deals honestly and fairly in all his business affairs. Such a man is George Yarnell. This is the certificate of his worth and ability that comes to us direct from both employer and employe. Mark his honorable methods during his campaign for the nomination! On more than one occasion it has come to our notice that where George Yarnell learned that a person whose support he was seeking had promised that support to an opponent, he was the first to say: "Then keep your promise; my nomination is not worth your breaking your word. I would not break my promise and I will not ask you to break yours." Add to this Mr. Yarnell's manly statement, made in "The Republican" office early in the campaign, and reiterated on the eve of the primaries. Said he: "If I win I want my opponents to help me be elected; if I am defeated I will take off my coat to help elect the one who is nominated."

Of Mr. Yarnell's fitness for the office of Sheriff there can be no question. That he would maintain the splendid record of Sheriff Hurley is equally certain. Honest toil and hard labor, guided by a conscience that was properly shaped in a country home, have fitted him for any vocation and it is our pleasure to say that George Yarnell would do credit to any office in the gift of the people of Centre County.

The contest for the Republican nomination for County Treasurer was lively to the finish. A lot of hustlers were in the race and the nomination of any one of the group would not have been a surprise. The honor went to Josiah Pritchard, of Philipsburg. Those who have met him face to face during the last few months of the campaign do not need to be told that he is worth knowing. To this we want to add that he is a man worth voting for, especially for such an important office as County Treasurer. He has all the characteristics of the man who "makes good." He has the confidence and respect of his home people. Vigorous, sturdy and absolutely his own master, Mr. Pritchard will conduct the office of County Treasurer in such a manner that there will be a strict accounting for every penny of the people's money. Thoroughly grounded in business principles, young

Will Make Bellefonte Hatchery Largest in Country for Trout—Frequency of Floods Prompted Giving up Spruce Creek Plant.

Plans are under way to consolidate the Bellefonte and Spruce Creek fish hatcheries and make the former the largest hatchery for the culture of trout in the country. William Hass, superintendent at the Spruce Creek hatchery, has been appointed superintendent of the Bellefonte hatchery and formally assumed charge on Monday.

The Spruce Creek hatchery has been washed out by floods on several occasions, the most recent case being that several weeks ago when Tyrone was visited by a cloudburst. It is not probable that the Spruce Creek hatchery will be rebuilt, but that the two hatcheries will be combined into one, and that to be located near Bellefonte.

SMITHGALL FAMILY HERE

Had Narrow Escape From Death in Flood Which Wiped Out Austin.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smithgall and two children, of Austin, who were at that place when the town was virtually wiped out by the bursting of a dam last Saturday, arrived in Bellefonte on Monday.

Mr. Smithdall remained but a short time, returning to Austin, where he is a professor in the public schools. Mrs. Smithgall and children are visiting with Col. and Mrs. J. L. Spangler. Before her marriage Mrs. Smithgall was Miss RomieV anPelt, of Centre Hall, a niece of Col. Spangler.

The Smithgall family had a narrow escape from being drowned when the flood swept through the town of Austin. The rushing water flooded their home, but several large trees standing in the front yard caused debris to lodge there and this broke the force of the flood at that point and saved the house from being carried away. Mrs. Smithgall's infant child and the nurse were in the house at the time. Mrs. Smithgall happened to be in the business part of the town when she learned of the approach of the flood. She hurried home and with her husband and children hastened to the hills, where they were safe. She says that she has no desire to return to Austin.

Rev. Mr. Durkee and wife and son, who at one time resided at Pleasant Gap, now live at Costello, near Austin, where the flood also caused much damage. William Durkee, of Pleasant Gap, another son, on Monday received a postal card saying that this father and mother and brother were safe.

Bellefonte Lodge, No 206, Loyal Order of Moose, on Tuesday sent a handsome check to aid in providing immediate relief for the flood victims at Austin.

Perry J. Alters, agent for the American Express Company in Bellefonte, on Tuesday was notified by the superintendent of the company that any packages containg food, clothing or supplies of any kind will be shipped free. Such packages should be addressed "Relief Committee, Austin or Costello, Pa.," and delivered to any American Express Company agent, who will attend to the shipping.

HOT FIGHT UNDER WAY FOR COUNTY OFFICES

Nomination of Rival Party Tickets Starts Ball Rolling.

ELECTION DAY NOV. 7

Complete Primary Returns Make No Change in Nominations as Announced in the Special Edition of "The Republican" on Monday.

Complete returns from the several election districts in Centre County make no change in the Republican and Democratic tickets as announced in the special edition of "The Republican" on Monday. Owing to the fact that in many districts the counting of the primary vote was not completed until Sunday morning, a number of districts were not heard from until Monday. The heavy floods in the Bald Eagle valley delayed the sending in of the returns from Curtin and Howard townships until Monday afternoon.

Saturday's primaries has brought to public notice the absolute necessity of increasing the pay of election boards if competent men are to be secured for this exacting duty in the future. The uniform primary system makes the duties of election officers extremely arduous, while the pay is ridiculously small. The election officers serve during the hours of the primary, or from 2 until 8 o'clock, p. m. They then must remain at the polling place and count the vote. The large blanket ballot used, and with a ballot for each party, made it a physical impossibility for the election officers in most districts to finish the counting of the vote before 5 or 6 o'clock Sunday morning. In several districts they did not finish until noon on Sunday. Each election officer is compelled by law to serve at the primary, and for his fifteen to eighteen hours of continuous and painstaking labor he receives the generous reward of $1.75. The injustice of the new law in this respect was never more apparent than at Saturday's primaries in Centre County. Many election officers were so disgusted by the time they finished counting the vote in their respective districts that they publicly declared that they would never again serve in that capacity. The State alone has power to change the pay of election officers. That the matter is one which should receive prompt consideration by the next Legislature is the judgment of all who had occasion to observe the difficulties under which election officers labored on Saturday and which are not likely to change while the blanket ballot system is in force.

As already announced by "The Republican," the tickets nominated on Saturday were:

Sheriff—George H. Yarnell, Republican; A. B. Lee, Democratic.

County Treasurer—Josiah Pritchard, Republican; John D. Miller, Democratic.

Prothonotary—Harry H. Diehl, Republican; David R. Foreman, Democratic.

County Commissioners—Jacob Woodring and H. E. Zimmerman, Republican; William H. Noll, Jr., and D. A. Grove, Democratic.

Recorder—William H. Brown, Republican; W. Francis Speer, Democratic.

Register—E. J. Williams, Republican; J. Frank Smith, Democratic.

District Attorney—James C. Furst, Republican; D. Paul Fortney, Democratic.

County Auditors—W. H. Goss and Clement H. Gramley, Republican; Jeremiah Brungart and S. H. Hoy, Democratic.

Coroner—Dr. P. S. Fisher, Republican and Democratic.

Surveyor—David W. Pletcher, Republican; J. H. Wetzel, Democratic.

The vote polled by candidates for Republican nominations where contests attended the primaries, follows:

Woodring's plurality, 435; Zimmerman's plurality, 399.

RECIPROCITY DEFEATED

Canada Votes Against Agreement Approved by United States.

Canada has awakened confronted by a startling new situation developed from the fact that the reciprocity with the United States had been rejected; that the Laurier government had been defeated and that R. L. Borden will shortly be called upon to form a Conservative ministry. That the changes ena ted by the registration of the will of the electorte are radical is shown by the overwhemling majority whereby the voters turned down the agreement which Laurier had made with the United States for the mutual removal of duties on food and other natural products by the defeat of seven cabinet ministers out of the thurteen who went to the polls and by the political landslide which will retire to private life Sir Wilfrid Laurier, acknowledged to be one of the biggest figures in the British empire.

Out of nine Canadian provinces, only Quebec, Laurier's native place, came anywhere near remaining faithful to him and Quebec did not do any too well. Ontario, the greatest of the provinces, dealt Laurier a terrible blow, going almost solidly against him and and the same may be said also of Manitoba and British Columbia. Saskatchewan and Alberta two great raising provinces, gave a mild support to the cause of reciprocity.

The magnitude of the landslide appears to have stunned the Liberals who have held office for fifteen consecutive years, and who firmly believed that they were destined to remain in power for many years to come.

On both sides sympathy is being expressed for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. His clean and gallant fight in behalf of reciprocity is recognized by opponents as well as supporters as one of the most notable campaigns ever undertaken in Canada. That his efforts were not crowned with success is still a matter of inexplicable amazement to many people in the dominion.

It is not unlikely that the departure of the present governor genral, Earl Grey, which was fixed for October 8, may now be deferred for a few days, and if this is done the new governor general, the Duke of Connaught, will also postpone the date of his sailing from England, as it is the invariable custom for the returning and the incoming governors general to pass each other upon the ocean. Earl Grey is familiar with Canadian affairs and could more conveniently participate in the details of calling and installing a new government.

A Little Girl's Toys.

The small child who enjoys "playing house" has a wealth of articles to make her pastime the more realistic. There are tiny washtubs, fitted not only with tubs and a wringer, but with washboards as well. When dolly's clothes have passed through the initial process of laundering, drying is next in order, and for this there are clotheslines and pins. For ironing day there are small ironing boards, irons and iron rests, together with miniature clothesbars, which fold up quite like mother's.

Sweeping day, with its manifold duties, calls for the small broom, dustpan, brush and carpet sweeper—and all of these things for children are to be found in the stores

For baking day there is nothing wanting, apparently, in the shape of cooking utensils, and many a small daughter may learn, through the use of her own furnishings, lessons valuable later in life.

For dolly there is likewise a most unusual assortment of things in the line of her wardrobe and toilet accessories. A complete toilet outfit in celluloid or metal for the dresser is to be had; there is a small suitcase, fitted with necessary things for traveling, while a parasol, shopping bag and mesh bag are provided. For pastime she has her roller skates and also her tennis racquet or golf sticks.

Planting a Young Orchard.

The editor of a prominent newspaper in Western Pennsylvania wrote to Prof. H. A. Surface, asking him how he could lay out his orchard of eight acres in such a way that the trees when planted would be a suitable distance apart for the different varieties, and at the same time would be cultivated each way.

He also asked for a list of fruits of various kinds to plant.

The reply is based on practical experience, and contains suggestions which may be helpful to many persons who wish to plant home orchards. It is as follows:

"Replying to your letter asking about planting your eight acres in fruits in such a way as to have straight rows throughout when the planting is finished, I beg to say that your best plan will be to plant your permanent apple trees forty feet apart. Half way between these, or twenty feet apart, plant your peach, plum and cherry. Half way between these, or ten feet apart, you can grow quince, dwarf pear and grapes. Half way between these again you can plant gooseberries and strawberries.

Your fillers in each instance can extend in each direction between any of the others. I am aware that there is a little difference in authorities as to the distance of planting, but I am satisfied that the standard distance for apples in good soil should not be less than forty feet, while a very safe and practical distance for planting peach, pear, cherry and plum is twenty feet. Further than this, I am at present growing dwarf pear trees ten feet apart, and half way between the standard trees planted twenty feet apart. Again half way between these dwarf pear trees I have my currant and gooseberry bushes, as suggested above. I am well satisfied with this arrangement. In fact, you can put a row of gooseberries each direction between the currants and pear trees, if you wish. By a narrow cultivator you can keep them all cultivated, which will be best for all the trees and plants. This will also permit you to cultivate them in each direction.

The varieties of apples that I would suggest for home use for your region are as follows: Yellow Trausparent, Red Astrachan, Summer Rambo, Maiden Blush, Smokehouse, Jonathan, Grimes Golden, Rome Beauty and Stayman's Winesap. The Stayman will perhaps prove to be your best winter apple. A few others seem to do well in that region. If you have elevated ground, the Baldwin will thrive there. The Winter Banana is also planted southward from you quite extensively.

For a commercial orchard I would greatly reduce the number of varieties, holding chiefly to Jonathan, Rome Beauty and Stayman's Winesap, with some Summer Rambo.

For pears the best varieties are the Bartlett, Seckel, Lawrence, and Duchess. The latter is the variety to use as a dwarf pear.

The best commercial peach is the Elberta, and it would be well to plant the following:

Campion, Mountain Rose, Elberta, Old Mixon Free, Late Crawford, Fox's Seedling, Smock, Reeve's Favorite and Wonderful are also first class peaches.

For home use I would recommend the planting of some earlier varieties than these.

For plums the German Prune, Lombare, Abundance, Shipper's Pride, Burbank, Damson and Yellow Egg are all to be recommended and different varieties are found profitable by different persons.

For cherries the best sour cherry is the Montmorency Improved. Early Richmond is also recommended.

Among the good sweet cherries are the Ida, Governor Wood, May Duke and Bigarreau,

I recommend fall planting if it is done properly. While planting with dynamite is getting to be quite a fad, because new, it has not been sufficiently tested to be proven universally beneficial. There are some cases in which it would no doubt prove helpful, but no one can say whether it would be beneficial or injurious, and in your particular case you should understand the circumstances there."

To remove potato, onion and other vegetable stains from the hands, rub with ripe tomatoes.

Get the stoves in order for the first cold-snap, when you really feel the cold more than in winter weather.

Crumpled newspapers pushed up the flues of unused chimneys keep out flies that would enter there.

Be sure to keep a pair of old scissors in the kitchen for the purpose of cutting raisins, lettuce, celery, etc.

Skim the fat off the chicken broth and use it to shorten biscuits. These are much more delicious than when you use lard.

A bank lately received the following note from a lady: "Please stop payment on the check I wrote out to-day, I accidentally burned it up."

Save all your coffee grounds; rinse them and use them to stuff pincushions. They will hold shape indefinitely and the pins push in easily.

If a tablespoonful of sweet milk is added to each yolk of egg when making custards, the mixture will not curdle when added to the boiling milk.

When cake icing is too hard so that you can not spread it on, add a little water, a drop at a time. When it is too thin, add sufficient powdered sugar, first rubbing out the lumps.

When paring vegetables, especially the humble tuber and odorous onion, slip over the forefinger of the right hand a kid finger cut from an old glove. It will save the hand from an unsightly stain.

By inspecting the canned fruit occasionally, the housewife will be able to save any that has begun to spoil, by carefully removing that which is tainted and cooking the rest over, recanning it as in the start.

Use worn-out white stockings for wash rags. Cut away the foot. Fold the top double and hem or overcast the edges. The edges may be bound, and a strap fastened across the corner to slip the hand through.

To cook eggplant, cut into slices half an inch thick and let them lie for an hour in salted water to remove that bitter taste. To fry, put the slices in the frying-pan with a small quantity of butter; turn when one side is done.

Have you tried baking eggs? Grease a baking-dish with butter, break the eggs into it, cover with cream. Add salt, pepper, and a tablespoonful of butter. Set it in a moderate oven a few minutes. Length of time depends on whether you like them soft or well done.—October Farm Journal.

Proper Way to Walk.

It's hard to walk gracefully in the present style of skirts, but it can be accomplished. Ankle movement is the secret of a graceful carriage. A still ankle results in the entire sole of the foot striking the ground simultaneously, giving a jarring, flat footed motion.

Shoulders thrown back, crown of head held high and chin well in are the rules to be observed above the waist line. This attitude gives the pedestrian a definite independent air that makes the man or woman of personality. Hand and arms should be left free, but the habit of constituting them a sort of human pendulum should be avoided.

A mincing step and an exaggerated mannish stride are to be equally avoided. Allow the limbs to swing free from the hips and note the exhilaration and buoyancy resulting from this practice.

The complaint against high heels is without foundation in the case of the woman with high arched foot who gains more support from the raised heel than from the abbreviated variety. By the same token it is injurious for the girl with a low arch to wear high heels, and the transgression of either one of these rules results in an awkwardness that no attractions of dress will overcome.

FOLEY'S ORINO LAXATIVE

FOR STOMACH TROUBLE AND CONSTIPATION

The Gate In The Hedge

Why It Was Closed and How Opened

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Pauline hummed a tune under her breath as she tied the ribbons of her little white shoes and reached for her tennis racket. With a swing of snowy linen skirts she tripped down the stairs and out into the golden California sunshine.

Playing tennis by oneself is never an entertaining pastime, but it is good exercise, and when one lives with a beautiful but melancholy maiden aunt on a retired country estate even daily gymnastics can border on the wildest excitement.

Pauline's method consisted in serving one or more balls across the net and then dashing around into the opposite court and returning the service with lightning rapidity and again darting back to return the stroke.

Pauline flitted back and forth with pink cheeks and shining eyes. Her loosened hair fell in two long braids below her slender waist, and under her breath she hummed the happy little tune broken by panting breath.

Once her strong young arm sent the ball sailing high over the tall hedge of Cherokee roses into the grounds of the adjoining estate, and it was returned to her with such surprising swiftness that involuntarily she sent it back again with a cry of triumph.

Again it returned, and once more Pauline sent it flying over the hedge.

There was a sharp exclamation, soft steps on the turf, and then over the dividing wall of roses appeared a shock of sun bleached hair, a pair of good gray eyes and a handsome tanned countenance.

"Knocked me out there, little girl," grinned the young man, holding out the ball.

Pauline's hands flew to her long braids and wound them in their accustomed coronet. Even then she did not look a day over fifteen, while she was really twenty-two.

"I beg your pardon," said the stranger, his grin fading away. "I thought you were a little girl, don't you know!"

"I'm not," explained Pauline with dignity. "Thank you for returning the ball," holding out her hand. "Why, it's not mine," she added, with a puzzled glance at him, "although it has my initials on it."

"P. G.?" laughed the man. "Those are mine too. "I'm Paul Graham—I live in the stone house yonder," he explained. "Your ball disappeared, and I substituted this one."

"I know," said Pauline, with a shy smile. "I've peeped at the house through the trees. It looks very lonely and mysterious with its shuttered windows."

"They are all wide open now, and if you care for neighbors—here we are!" He smiled ingratiatingly. "I've heard there used to be a gate in this Cherokee hedge. I wonder where it is."

Pauline flushed delicately and looked away with embarrassed eyes. "I believe the gate was down in the rose garden. It is nailed up now and overgrown with roses."

"Why was it nailed up? Do you know?" he asked bluntly.

She shook her head slightly. "I have often wondered. Once I asked my aunt, Miss Greye, but she never answered my question. A gate between two gardens always seems so friendly. Don't you think so?"

He nodded. "This used to be our home, you know—the stone house, I mean—but it is many years since we lived here. Since I was a little boy I distinctly recollect that gate in the hedge, and I have always retained a vision of a stately young woman with jet black hair and a coldly beautiful face, who walked in a wilderness of roses on the other side of the gate."

"That must have been Aunt Ruth," said Pauline. "Only her hair is like snow. But she is still beautiful and so cold. I wish she were not."

"I'm taking a holiday. I wish your aunt would invite me over to play tennis. Perhaps she remembers me," suggested Graham.

"I'm sure she would invite you if she knew you were here," said Pauline politely. "I must run in now. She would scold if she knew I had talked so long with a stranger. But it's awfully dull here. That is my only excuse." She moved slowly away and nodded a friendly farewell.

The door of the library was ajar, and Pauline pushed it gently open and peeped inside.

Seated at a flat desk was Ruth Greye. In the subdued light of the dimly lighted room she looked like a marble statue. Her gown was white, and above it her white throat arose in a stately column to support her beautiful head. Her face was lovely in spite of its pallor and crowned with soft masses of prematurely whitened hair. Her brows formed straight black lines, and the dark lashes and brown eyes were drooped over the desk. One white hand glided smoothly across the paper as she wrote.

Pauline watched her with admiration in her eyes. What could have been the sorrow that had taken all the light from her aunt's face and left it a beautiful mask of woe?

Miss Greye looked up and caught the girl's admiring gaze. A faint pink tinged her cheek and then faded. She wiped her pen and placed it on the tray, thrust her papers in a velvet portfolio and arose to her stately height.

"Pauline," she said in her slow contralto, "I have instructed James to lay out a new court on the north side of the house. In the meantime please do not play tennis."

"Why not?" asked Pauline boldly.

"Because I desire it," returned her aunt haughtily. "That should be reason enough, Pauline, but I will add that the owners of the house next door have returned, and I forbid any one of my household having communication with them."

"I am sorry," said Pauline calmly, "but I have been talking with the son, Paul Graham."

"What do you mean? Where did you meet him?" demanded Miss Greye quickly.

In a few words Pauline related the incident which had led to her acquaintance with young Graham. "He said he used to know you when he was a little boy, Aunt Ruth, but if you don't wish me to I won't speak to him again."

Miss Greye's fine eyes blazed with anger. "I do not forbid you to, Pauline, but I hope you will not. Paul Graham's father is a detestable man. When I tell you that once upon a time I was engaged to marry him he was a widower, and Paul was a little lad in dresses then. Walter Graham is a publisher, and I showed him a poem I had written. Pauline, he laughed at it."

Pauline, startled by this sudden confidence, knew not what to say. Makers of books and publishers were remote beings who rarely strayed into her practical little world. Still, she longed to comfort the troubled woman.

"Perhaps he laughed because—was it a humorous poem, Aunt Ruth?" she asked timidly.

"Humorous!" scoffed Miss Greye. "It was called 'Love's Dirge.'"

"Oh," said Pauline faintly. "I have no doubt it was a beautiful poem."

"It was," admitted the poetess briefly. "After that, of course, everything was ended between Walter and me. I had the gate in the rose garden nailed up, and now the hedge has so overgrown it that it cannot be found. It is like the incident—it is closed for ever."

"And overgrown with the roses of memory," murmured Pauline as she left the room and went upstairs.

In the library Ruth Greye stood with down bent head, her eyes fixed on the rug at her feet. "The roses of memory," she repeated softly, and there were tears in her eyes.

At the end of six weeks the repairs on the stone house were about completed. Father and son had overseen the regeneration of the neglected estate until it verily bloomed as the roses that crowded it. Paul Graham had registered time by his encounters with Pauline Greye.

They had met many times. Four times he had passed her pony cart as his motor whizzed by. Then he had tired of the car as an unsociable means of locomotion and mounted a horse. Often he had overtaken her equipage and ridden slowly beside her as they talked, for Pauline had decided she would avail herself to Miss Greye's permission and continue her acquaintance with the most interesting young man she had ever met. Their acquaintance ripened quickly, and one day when Pauline returned home and saw the reflection of her own happy face in the mirror she blushed as she realized she had learned the most beautiful thing in the world. After that she did not drive. She shyly kept to the northern grounds or dreamed over a book in the wide veranda.

Paul haunted the roads restlessly. His own love was an acknowledged fact to himself, yet because of Pauline's unguarded position he dared not trust himself to see much of her, and he was miserable when she, too, hid herself away.

One gloriously beautiful morning Ruth Greye arose from a sleepless couch and walked slowly among the dew drenched roses in her garden. She stopped now and then to inhale the fragrance of a Cloth of Gold rose or to break a tiny cluster of half opened buds. Suddenly she came to the place where the hedge had overgrown the rustic gate. She stopped abruptly and looked with startled eyes.

The hedge had been carefully trimmed away, and the rustic gate, released from its fastenings, swung idly with the light breeze. Ruth moved close to the hedge and buried her face in the sweet smelling roses.

There was a firm step on the path, and she looked up quickly to meet the glance of Walter Graham on the other side of the rustic gate. Her breath came quickly, and she summoned all her pride and fortitude to steel her heart against her former lover.

His hand was on the swinging gate. "You have opened it at last, Ruth," he said in a low tone. "Did you open it for me after all these years?"

She did not answer. She was looking through the vistas of the rose garden, for in the distance two people were walking. It was Paul and Pauline, and his arm was about her waist, and the glint of her golden hair shone against the black of his coat. So Ruth and Walter had once walked in years gone by.

"Did you open the gate for me, Ruth?" repeated Walter Graham patiently.

Ruth pointed toward the lovers. "I am too proud and obstinate to do such a gracious deed," she said slowly. "She—Pauline—must have opened the gate for your son. Walter, let me open the gate for you. Will you come back?" She laid her hand on the gate, and it swung back for the first time in many years to admit him to the garden of his love.

Kingsley's Stammering.

Charles Kingsley loved talking, had an enormous deal to say on every conceivable subject and longed to say it. But his stammer was always checking him. He gurgled and gasped and made faces and would sometimes break off in a conversation or a meal, rush out into the open air and liberate his suppressed emotions by rapid exercise or physical exertion. Yet, as has often been observed in similar cases, when he had to preach the stammer subsided, and, though there was some facial contortion, the flow of the discourse was never interrupted. He said to his friend Tom Hughes: "I could be as great a talker as any man in England but for my stammering. When I am speaking for God in the pulpit or paying by bedsides I never stammer. My stammer is a blessed thing for me. It keeps me from talking in company and from going out as much as I should do but for it."—G. W. E. Russell in Winchester Guardian.

Lisbon in Pepys' Times.

Pepys' Diary gives an unflattering picture of the Lisbon court in his day. On Oct. 17, 1661, he talked with Captain Lambert, fresh from "Portugall," who told him it was "a very poor, dirty place—I mean the city and court of Lisbon; * * * that there are no glass windows, nor will they have any; * * * that the king has his meat sent up by a dozen of lazy guards and in pipkins sometimes to his own table and sometimes nothing but fruits and now and then half a hen. And now that the infanta is become our queen she is come to have a whole hen or goose to her table, which is not ordinary." Some few months later, when some "Portugall ladys" had come to London, Pepys found them "not handsome and their farthingales a strange dress. * * * I find nothing in them that is pleasing, and I see they have learnt to kiss and look freely up and down already and I do believe will soon forget the recluse practice of their own country."

Opportunity.

There is a story of a sculptor who once showed a visitor his studio, which was full of gods, some of them very curious. The face of one was entirely concealed by the hair, and there were wings on each foot. The visitor asked this statue's name.

"Opportunity," was the reply.

"And why is his face hidden?"

"Because men seldom know him when he comes to them."

"Why has he wings on his feet?"

"Because he is soon gone and once gone can never be overtaken," was the reply.

We all know the story of the man who sold the old farm which he had barely been able to get a living from during his entire life and his amazement and chagrin when the new owner discovered gold upon the land the first week of his ownership. A great many of us are in that very condition with regard to our opportunities if we did but know it.—Washington Star.

Pampered Pups.

The dog doctor was making out a bill for the month's expenses of a Japanese spaniel. The items were room rent, board, medical attendance and electric light.

"Electric light?" exclaimed his secretary. "What on earth does a dog need with electric light?"

"He doesn't need it at all," said the doctor, "but his owner has ordered it, and he has been supplied with two eight-candle power lights every evening he has been in the hospital. He is one of those spoiled pups who were put to bed in a light room in their infancy, and now he cannot sleep in the dark. We always have two or three of that kind on hand. They occupy a special ward where the lights burn all night long."—New York Sun.

Collar as a Verb.

The verb "collar" has long been used transitively, meaning to "seize or take hold of a person by the collar; more loosely, to capture." The verb was thus employed early in the seventeenth century. Steele in the Guardian, No. 84, wrote, "If you advised him not to collar any man." Other instances are Gentleman's Magazine, 1762, "His lordship collared the footman who threw it," and Marryat's sentence in "Peter Simple," "He was collared by two French soldiers."

A Tenant For Life.

"Have you boarded long at this house?" inquired the new boarder of the sour, dejected man sitting next to him.

"About ten years."

"I don't see how you can stand it. Why haven't you left long ago?"

"No other place to go," said the other dismally. "The landlady's my wife."

The Family Scrap Book.

Mrs. Sauers (to Willy as minister calls to see Mr. Sauers)—Willy, is your father in? Willy—Yes; he's upstairs looking over your scrap book. Mrs. Sauers (puzzled)—You mean my family account book? Willy—Well, it's all the same. He and you always have a scrap every time he goes over it.

"Portrait of a Gentleman."

The Professor—Can you define a gentleman, Miss Cutting? The Suffragette (deily)—Certainly. A gentleman was contemporaneous with the old masters, who often painted his portrait.—Exchange.

Suited His Temperament.

"Grooge is a very grouchy sort of man, isn't he?"

"Yes. Won't even ride in anything but a sulky."—Baltimore American.

Seek knowledge as if thou wert to be here forever.—Herder.

One on the Judge.

The lawyer for the prosecution had finished his closing argument, and the judge, a pompous and long winded individual, was charging the jury.

He was in the midst of an unusually long and tedious address when he suddenly noticed that one of the jurymen had fallen fast asleep. The indignation of his honor was boundless. Rapping sharply on his desk, he awakened the slumberer, who seemed not at all abashed at being thus caught napping. After glaring at him angrily for a few moments the magistrate in his most sarcastic tone said:

"So that's the way you attend to your duty, is it? You're a fine speciment to have on a jury. Do you think your opinion will be of any value when I send you out to determine the fate of this prisoner?"

"Yes, sir," said the juryman quietly; "I think so."

"Oh, you do, do you?" shouted the exasperated judge. "Pray tell me, sir, how long you have been sleeping?"

"I don't know, your honor," was the reply. "How long have you been talking?"—New York Herald.

Getting Rich Quick.

A souse wandered into a downtown barber shop and after being shaved sat down in the bootblack's chair.

"How do you get paid? Wages?" he asked.

"No, suh," answered the bootblack; "I work on a percentage. Sixty puh cent's mine."

"Shickshty p'cent yours?" said the souse deliberatly. "Shickshty p'cent."

"Yes, suh."

"'Fyou taken in hundred dollars you keep shickshty?"

"Yes, suh."

"'Fyou take in thousan' you keep shicksh hundred?"

"Yes, suh."

"An' hundred thousan' you keep shicksbty thousan'?"

"Yes, suh."

"My, my," said the souse in puzzled manner, "what're you goin' t' do with so much money?"—New York Journal.

Warning the Colonel.

A raw recruit from a remote corner of the Green Isle was engaged for the first time in a field maneuver in England on outpost duty. The sergeant instructed him to look out carefully for the colonel coming to inspect the post.

After an hour he returned and asked the soldier, "Has the colonel been here?"

Receiving an answer in the negative, he went away, returning later on with the same inquiry.

Awhile later the colonel appeared. The recruit did not salute properly, which incensed the colonel, who as a hint asked him:

"Do you know who I am?"

"Faith and I do not," answered the recruit.

"I am the colonel."

"Begorra, you will catch it then," said the soldier. "The sergeant has been asking twice for yez already!"

Far From Upright.

Reilly and Coran were "having it out." They had been deadly enemies for years, but neither had offered to lay hands on the other up to now, both of them being somewhat afraid of the issue.

Before they commenced it was stipulated that it was to be a fair "stand up" fight, and with that they started. Coran had it all his own way from the beginning. He kept knocking Reilly down and down again until that worthy was about sick of it. He turned to the bystanders and said, "Sure, an' wasn't it to be a fair, stand up fight?"

"It was," returned an onlooker.

"An' 'ow, thin, can he be expectin' me ter foight 'im fairly if he do be knockin' me down all the time?"—London Ideals.

A Polished Diplomat.

"Did you see anything that particularly struck your fancy when you were looking round the furniture shops today?" asked a young husband of his lately made wife on her return from a tour of furniture inspection.

"Yes," she replied; "I saw something exceedingly pretty in looking glasses."

"I have no doubt you did," he observed, "if you looked into them."

The halo of a calm, sweet peace rests upon that home.

Idleness.

It is an undoubted truth that the less one has to do the less one finds time to do it in. One yawns, one procrastinates, one can do it when one will, and therefore one seldom does it at all, whereas those who have a great deal of business must buckle to it, and then they always find time enough to do it in.

The Hardest Thing.

"What's the hardest thing about roller skating when you're learning?" asked a hesitating young man of the instructor at a rink.

"The floor," answered the attendant.

A Dilemma.

For the Serious Moment.

Picked Out For Each Other

An Attempt at Matchmaking That Met With a Setback

By EDGAR MINTURN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the autumn of 19— I received a note from Eileen Duncan, who had married my chum, Charlie Duncan, inviting me to their country place in the New Hampshire hills. "We are to entertain a house party," said Mrs. Duncan, "which will be incomplete without you. Charlie and I are so happy that we wish to confer a like happiness on you. A girl will be a member of your party whom we have picked out for you. We are not going to tell you which one of our guests she is, nor are we going to tell her who is the man we have picked out for her, though we have told her that such a man is to be present. We are going to leave you to find each other."

"Well, now," I said to myself, "I like that. Heaven protect me from those girls whom I am told I am expected to marry! But in this case there is an element of uncertainty. I am left free to choose, and the lady is as free as I. There's something of the game of 'hide and seek' in it. I'll attend the house party."

Charlie inherited a large fortune and owns one of those big tracts of land on which our rich Americans are setting up their country places. The house would easily accommodate fifty guests. On my arrival I found nearly that number assembled, three-quarters of them being young unmarried persons. I have no faith in women's idea of justice or fairness and thought it more than likely that Eileen Duncan would give the girl for whom she had picked me out an advantage over me—at least a hint as to when she was "warm" or when she was "cold," as the children do in their hiding games—but Charlie said on his word of honor we should neither of us receive the slightest assistance in the matter.

I looked the women over, feeling sure that if my hosts had struck the right one for me I would know her at once. Whether or no I struck the girl they had decided upon, I certainly noticed one whose general makeup pleased me very much. She was a Miss Hester Adams. One of the guests, John Crowell, was attentive to her, so that I did not at once get much opportunity to devote myself to her.

And here was a point in this little game whereln I, a man, had an advantage. I could seek out the girl who had been chosen for me, while she must remain passive. On the other hand, she might remain hidden within herself, a corps of observation, watching the enemy's movements.

Within a week I found myself rivaling John Crowell and several other men for the favor of Hester Adams. She was by no means the most prominent young lady in the party, but any one with discernment could detect in her a certain worth which, after all other things being equal, determines the real standing of both men and women. Crowell seemed to have the inside track, the rest of us standing about even, although I can remember, looking back to that far period, that I was not left without an occasional morsel of comfort.

But one afternoon a terrible gulf came up between Hester Adams and myself. We men were all roomed on the third floor, while the women were on the second. Going up to dress for dinner, I was obliged to pass Crowell's room. His door stood ajar, and, looking in, I saw a lady standing before the dresser. She took up a jeweled scarfpin and examined it. Her back was toward me, but I saw her face reflected in the mirror over the dresser. She was Hester Adams. Sticking the pin in her corsage where it would be hidden, she was turning when I, not wishing her to see me, went on to my room.

Of all the positions in which I have ever found myself this was surely the most singular, the most unpleasant. I had seen a guest, one in whom I was beginning to be interested, in the men's quarters steal jewelry. Whether she knew it or not I could not tell, but the man from whom she was pilfering was Crowell, who was devoted to her.

An hour later we assembled at dinner. Naturally I looked at Miss Adams. I failed to catch her eye, but I saw in it a troubled expression. During the dinner she seemed to be thinking of something else than what was said to her. Fearing to show a difference in my treatment of her, I did not address her while we were dining nor during the evening.

My secret weighed upon me. What surprised me was a certain disappointment I felt in Hester Adams. It convinced me that the little god had wounded me, though I had not known it. I brooded over the theft I had seen. Was it an effect of kleptomania? Surely the girl had no occasion to steal. I had noticed a frightened look on her face which indicated that she was cognizant of what she was doing. I wondered if she knew that she was in Crowell's room. I saw her going into her own room the next morning and noticed that it was directly under the one in which she had committed the theft. I had seen Crowell wear the scarfpin and watched to see if it had been returned to him. I fancying the thief might have done so under qualms of conscience. But Crowell did not appear with it in his neckwear. I thought to ask him if he had missed it, but nothing could have induced me to give the slightest intimation of what I had seen.

Naturally this disagreeable feature of my visit marred my enjoyment, and, as for the game I had looked forward to playing with some interest, I forgot it entirely. One evening the hostess said to me.

"You have disappointed me in not having shown a preference for any of the girls of the party. To make the matter more interesting I am going to tell you that I noticed in her a decided preference for you as soon as you arrived."

"A preference for me!" I exclaimed, surprised.

"Yes, for you?"

"What indication did she give of the fact?"

"Don't you wish you knew?" and, tapping me playfully with her fan, she ran away to other guests.

During the rest of our stay at the Duncans' country place Hester Adams seemed always to have something on her mind. For a time she was sought by her admirers as before, but like seeks like, and the young men, finding her preoccupied and unentertaining, gradually drew away to more animated companions. I, too, with the secret on my mind, was moody and ill disposed to join in the gay sports our host provided for us. And shortly before the expiration of the term for which I had been invited I made an excuse to leave. Charlie drove me to the station and while we were waiting for the train said to me:

"Eileen is greatly disappointed at the failure of her effort to make a match for you."

"I'm sorry not to oblige her, but you know those things can't be forced. Possibly had I known the girl your wife picked out for me I might have done better."

"She's a splendid woman."

"I say, Charlie, since we've not mated and it's all over, suppose you tell me who she is."

"Eileen would divorce me if I did."

"On my honor, she shall never know from me."

There was a whistle, and the train rolled up. Just as I was about to get aboard Charlie whispered in my ear:

"Hester Adams."

I tumbled into the car and sank in my seat in a semi-stunned condition.

The little god likes startling things. Better a disagreeable episode than none at all. Some of the most violent loves have started with a quarrel. The secret I carried with me had kept Hester Adams in my mind to the exclusion of all others. Eileen Duncan had told me that the girl she had picked out for me had shown me a preference. And now comes Charlie and reveals her as the girl I had caught pilfering. Surely Cupid must have chuckled over such a complicated situation.

Charlie's information capped the climax. It revealed to me that the plan to mate me, so far as I was concerned, had been eminently successful, but a plan to marry me had resulted in a catastrophe. The happy issue in my case would be paradoxical—marriage with a thief.

Soon after the Duncans returned to the city I received a note from Eileen as follows:

A confession has been made to me concerning something that occurred during your recent visit to us. One of our guests—one I esteem very highly—has made me her confidant. I believe every word she says, and your and my friendship hereafter depends upon your believing her too.

I paused to remark that this was a very womanly statement. It confirmed my ideas of the inconsiderateness of the sex.

Please come over on Tuesday evening and hear what is due the lady that you should know.

To describe my feelings at this promised explanation of what I regarded inexplicable would be impossible. I counted the hours till Tuesday evening, then went to the Duncans'. I was ushered into a drawing room, where stood a single person. That person was Hester Adams. She seemed to have lost twenty pounds since I had last seen her. I bowed deferentially, and without seating herself or asking me to be seated she said:

"During my visit at the Duncans' one day I went upstairs, so wrapped in something of which I was thinking that I passed over two flights of stairs instead of one and entered the room directly over mine. Advancing to the dresser, still thinking of what was on my mind, I picked up a scarfpin. At that moment my reverie was broken by a footstep in the hall, and in the glass before me I saw you."

"Saw me!" I interrupted.

"It flashed upon me that I was in a man's apartment. I have since seen how unwise I was not to come out and take the consequences. I feared not to be believed. It seemed to me that I must bear the imputation of having gone to a man's room for a purpose. I preferred that purpose to be considered theft. I put the scarfpin I had inadvertently taken up in my corsage and turned slowly enough to enable you to pass on without our meeting."

"I have been a fool," I exclaimed, "not to have known that you could see my reflection as well as I could see yours. It is I who have been to blame, not you. I should have been chevalier enough to attribute your presence in that room to a mistake. Had I known that you saw me I should have certainly assured you of my perfect confidence in your innocence."

And so it was that my friend's effort in my behalf, notwithstanding my folly, turned out to my advantage. They were much pleased at its ultimate success, and I was made happy in the wife they had placed in my way.

TOO MUCH FOREMAN.

When Dave Foreman became a candidate for Prothonotary he dealt in with the Democratic bosses. He made no active campaign and spent but a day or two calling on voters. Depending on the bosses he allowed them to boss the job.

Ciny Hoffer, of Philipsburg, also became a candidate for nomination for Prothonotary. He didn't deal in with the Democratic bosses. He honestly believed that he would receive a square deal. He spent his time and money in a conscientious endeavor to call upon the voters. He naturally believed that the nomination should be for the man willing to go out and work for it.

The Democratic bosses pulled off the trick for Foreman. They knifed Hoffer and made it impossible for him to win.

Foreman hopes to be elected Prothonotary. At the end of his term he expects to again become Deputy Prothonotary. His platform is to feed forever at the public crib. Having spent virtually all his life drawing salary from the taxpayers he wants them to keep him on the pay roll until he answers the final roll call, and then he won't answer unless there is something in it for him.

But will the taxpayers do it? We don't think so. We believe they are becoming weary of too much Foreman. It's time a Republican Prothonotary is elected any how. This will be a good opportunity to elect the first Rebublican to that office. Harry Diehl is both capable and deserving. Instead of feeding at the public crib he has been out hustling for his living. He earned his nomination after a good, stiff contest. Now, let all good citizens help elect him. Why not give Foreman a chance to get away from the public crib and make room for somebody else?

Make Caustic Denial.

The "Democratic Watchman" in a recent issue published a communication seriously reflecting upon the school directors of College township, only to have members of the board issue a reply, denying the charges and offering as proof of their assertions figures taken from their financial report.

The article published by the "Democratic Watchman" was addressed to "The taxpayers of College township," and was signed "Tax Payer." The statement was as follows:

"Have you read the financial report of the school directors of your township? Did you notice the amount they charged for enforcing the compulsory school attendance act. $725.84 to compel the little children to go to school. Also one day at State College $19.00, which would be $3.00 a piece and $1.00 for smoke. Also $60.00 paid the nine teachers to attend a picnic and have a good time with 253 scholars enrolled. Average attendance 175. For text books $318.88 and other supplies than text books $369.37. I suppose this last amount is for tablets and lead pencils. A total for supplies of $688.25.

"Tax payers did you figure out how much that is for each scholar?

"Don't these directors know how to spend the people's money. International William have you burnt your books as secretary and how about the president? Had he any finger in the report? Won't he swear at the huckster?

"Did Elmer go asleep when he audited the account of Frank and George, silent partners. Tax payers you should demand an itemized report and find out where this money went to. More the next time.

"TAX PAYER".

The denial by the schooi board is made over the signature of W. O. Dougherty, of Lemont, secretary of the board. Mr. Dougherty called at "The Republican" office and produced the financial report of the school board to bear out the several points of the general denial. The statement issued by Mr. Dougherty for the school board follows:

Lemont, Pa. Oct. 2, 1911.

Answer to Tax Payer, College Township:

Your statement in the "Democratic Watchman" of last week is either a deliberate falsehood or the product of a muddled brain.

Your statement showing $725.84 as spent to compel the little children to go to school will be answered first. The school report clearly states that the item for Old Debt is $693.75, and interest amounting to $32.09, making a total of $725.84. Three hundred dollars of this is a note of Emanuel Houser and the balance is due to Rand-McNally Co. and others. Not one cent was charged for compelling children to attend school.

Your statement that $19 was spent for supposed entertainment at State College for the school board is not true. This item is for attendance at the annual meeting of school directors in Bellefonte.

Your next statement that $60 was paid to have the teachers attend a picnic is equally false. Had you read the statement with any care you would have thereby learned that the $69 was for the attendance of the teachers at the County Institute. Such attendance is required by law.

The items for text books and supplies are correct and we have receipted bills to cover all of them. The law says that we must furnish these things. It may be that this is not a good law, and if so one of your cleverness should have it repealed.

We are surprised that you should have worked from June, last, to September 29 to ferret out the gross wrongs of the College township school directors and then lacked the courage to attach your name to the published statement. However, your are well known to the community and we are satisfied the people of College township will properly reward you for your bid for their favor.

enough to possess enthusiasm and spirit and yet old enough to know the value of conservatism, he goes upon the ticket with the assurance that he will receive a flattering indorsement from his friends and neighbors and we venture the prediction that he will be just as generously supported by Republicans in all parts of Centre County.

The man who has been tried and has proved his ability naturally appeals to those who know the need of selecting such an one as Register and Clerk of the Orphans Court. The office is one involving a mass of important detail and requires as its head a man who is more than ordinarily well qualified. The Clerk of the Orphans Court is in effect a probate judge. He must be in charge of records and other papers whose value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. A bungler placed in that office would cause confusion that could not be eradicated in twenty years to come. The damage an inefficient official would do could never be fully overcome. It is because he is capable and efficient, because he is qualified by experience and because he is by nature a gentlemanly, courteous man, that we point with the greatest satisfiaction to the nomination of E. J. Williams, of Union township, for Register. In congratulating him upon his nomination we do so by saying that the Republicans of Centre County are to be congratulated for making him their nominee for this important office.

The returns from the last two or three districts were necessary to determine who had won the Republican nomination for Prothonotary. This was one of the prettiest contests at the primaries. Down to the recording of the final returns Mr. Diehl and Mr. Rothrock, as friendly rivals, declared that both should turn in for the winner, regardless of which might be named. The majority vote was in favor of Mr. Diehl, who becomes the nominee, and one of his warmest supporters is his unsuccessful opponent, Mr. Rothrock. Harry Diehl is a young business man of industry and integrity. He has demonstrated his ability to get out and hustle. The splendid contest he waged for the nomination foreshadows the activity which will mark his race for election. He is a young man and he deserves to win. Give him your support.

Everybody was glad to see Recorder William H. Brown renominated. He has proven himself to be such a capable and obliging official that it will be a pleasure to many to vote for him in November. He is entitled to a second term. The high standard he has maintained in the office of Recorder of Deeds is spoken of in words of praise by all. The accurate recording of deeds is a matter which goes straight home to every property owner. Some nice, easy going, careless person might serve as a half-baked experiment in the office of Recorder of Deeds but property owners owe it to themselves to place in that office a man who is competent and who may be trusted to properly record their deeds and thereby protect their interests. Recorder Brown has proved himself to be the man for the place.

James C. Furst, for District Attorney; David W. Pletcher, for County Surveyor, and W. H. Goss and Clement H. Gramley, for County Auditors, had no opposition, and, of course, each was nominated. As "The Republican" pointed out before the primaries, Messrs. Goss and Gramley are so ruggedly honest and conservative that one would naturally turn to men of their type to have one's books honestly and carefully audited. The people of Centre County may rest assured that if elected Messrs. Goss and Gramley will audit the county books in a manner which will be satisfactory to the most exacting critic. We have implicit confidence in both men and earnestly commend them to the people of Centre County for their support in November. Mr. Pletcher's ability as a surveyor warrants his receiving every Republican vote in Centre County. He is experienced, he is a hard, conscientious worker and will make a first-class County Surveyor. Mr. Furst, in aspiring to election as District Attorney, shows a commendable ambition to advance in the practice of the law. He is a young lawyer with a good legal mind. If elected he will inaugurate in the office of District Attorney the much-needed policy of prompt preparation and speedy trial of cases—a policy that has been lacking in past years and one which has been justly criticised.

Howard.

After a pleasant three weeks visit with her friend Mrs. Anna Harvey, Miss Zona Scott returned on Friday to her home in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. Mary Ellinger and Mrs. Oscar Foust, of Milton, were week end visitors with Miss Mittie Lucas

Rev. R. S. Taylor left on Tuesday for Winchester, where he will spend two weeks with his brother.

Miss Mittie Lucas now has her fall display of fashionable millinery and the ladies of Howard will do well to patronize her.

Marius Miner and Master William Holter were visitors in Lock Haven Saturday.

Christie Schenck and bride arrived home from Atlantic City on Sunday and will reside with his father.

Mrs. R. S. Taylor is attending the W. C. T. U. convention at Warren as a delegate.

Miss S. Ella Hall, assistant to her brother, Postmaster W. F. Hall, left on Tuesday morning for Pittsburg, where she will visit friends for a week or ten days.

Mrs. Mary DeHaas, Mrs. W. J. Kurtz and Mrs. Will Weber were Lock Haven shoppers on Saturday.

Oscar M. Lucas returned to his work in Altoona on Thursday.

Mrs. Nellie Bechdel, (nee Zeigler) of Altoona, is visiting friends about Howard.

Mr. Shroyer third trick man at the tower, moved his family here from Bald Eagle last week and now occupies the Jesse Leathers house.

Mrs. J. Will Conley, of Bellefonte, spent several days last week with friends in Howard.

Mrs. Crissie D. Tanner, of Bellefonte, was a guest of her father and sister on Thursday last.

Philip Holter, one of the contestants in "The Republican's" big subscription prize offer, has been quite ill the past few days with quinsy and under the care of a physician.

Owing to unforseen complication it was found necessary to amputate Walter Shay's foot at the Bellefonte hospital. The operation was performed on Saturday and the lad is reported as getting along nicely.

Miss Mary Weirick returned last week from a visit with her sister in Altoona.

On account of the flood in Bald Eagle creek on Monday Miss Lulu Schenck, Thomas Robb, J. L. Gardner, W. C. Thompson and Miss Pearl Gates, teachers in the nearby districts, were unable to reach their schools, as were also many of the pupils.

Mrs. Orlando Smith, of Altoona, was a week end visitor with her brother C. A. Walizer.

Mrs. Sherman Holter left on Thursday for a visit with friends in Williamsport.

Mrs. C. G. Evans left on Saturday for Harrisburg for a visit with Mr. Evans' parents and about the 15th will leave for Jenkins, Kentucky, where Mr. Evans is employed and where they will make their future home.

The continued downpour of rain on Sunday caused the Bald Edgle creek to overflow on Monday and the water rose to the greatest height since 1889. All the bottom lands were overflowed and some farmers lost as much as 1000 bushels of corn.

Delbert Confer met with a very serious accident last Saturday and is fortunate to have escaped with his life. Mr. Confer had gone to Marsh Creek to trade horses with Wm. Welch and during the "try-out" Mr. Welch's horse kicked and struck Mr. Confer in the face, partly severing his nose from his face and inflicting an ugly gash in his forehead. Dr. McEntire gave him medical attention and then took him to the Lock Haven hospital for further treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Johnson arrived home on Wednesday from an extended wedding tour and were tendered a reception at the Leathers home. About sixty persons attended the reception including from a distance Mr. and Mrs. Milton Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Coxey, Mr. and Mrs. Stover, Miss Kate Parker, of Bellefonte; Miss Alma Ruch, of Northumberland; Miss Rocky, of Zion; Miss Zona Scott, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hall, of Beech Creek. Delicious refreshments were served and the Howard band gave them a royal serenade.

Considerable damage was done in this vicinity by the flood on Monday, some farmers losing the greater part of their corn and others all they had, amounting in all to thousands of bushels. The flood was the highest in recent years, having no parallel at this time of the year for carrying away so much corn. One incident was that in one of the fields of Lynn Pletcher. His corn was floated away, but the pumpkins clung to the vines and floated on the surface. Chester Neff, on the west side of town, lost all his corn and pumpkins, and the larger part of his buckwheat and potatoes. Farmers up the valley had to remove their stock from their barns, and others had poultry drowned.

Unionville.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Stere departed on Tuesday for Eaglemere and Bloomsburg, expecting to be gone about two weeks.

W. B. Shipley has purchased the property occupied until recently by John P. Harris, Jr. The latter expects to move next week.

Joseph P. Barton, who is employed by the B. & O. R. R. at Confluence, spent a few days with his many friends here. Joe is looking fine. He returned to his work on Monday.

Charles Holtzworth, who has been confined to his bed with typhoid fever for the last three weeks, is slowly improving, we are glad to note. Latest reports from Roy Miles and John Rowan are that they are getting along splendidly.

It commenced to rain here on Sunday at 12.30 and continued a steady downpour until 9.30 that night. Great damage was done all along the valley. J. W. Bruss, G. W. Morrison, D. E. Fisher and Edward Hall claim to have lost about one thousand bushels of corn. The water came into William McEwen's house and was about two feet deep in the kitchen. The water also ran through the rear of the Methodist Episcopal church. Charles Potter lost all his wood. Hazels, McEwens and F. A. Holderman had to move their pigs to higher ground to keep them from being drowned. This was the highest water here since the Johnstown flood.

The Persian Crow's Beak.

There is a weapon known as the crow's beak which was formerly much in use among men of rank in Persia and north India. It was a horseman's weapon and consisted of a broad curved dagger blade fixed at right angles to a shaft, pickax fashion. The shaft incloses a dagger, unscrewing at the butt end. This concealed dagger is a very common feature of Indian arms and especially of the battleaxes of Persia.

Her Question Answered.

Yes, Geraldine, we quite agree with you that the crunching of celery is a noise abhorrent to the sensitive soul. A much better way is to cut the stalks into medium sized pieces and hold them in the mouth until they dissolve.

Write again, Geraldine. We are always glad to dispense useful information.—Lippincott's.

Maternal Pride.

Mr. Newlywed—This paper says there are 50,000,000 babies born every year. Mrs. Newlywed—Oh, darling, doesn't that make you proud? Mr. N.—Why should it? Mrs. N.—Why, just to think that our baby is the smartest and prettiest of 50,000,000.—Cleveland Leader.

An Amendment.

A health hint says, "Do not bolt your food." And a comedian comes back with the observation, "It is much better to use a padlock."—Exchange.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.

is what you need. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask your druggist.

Grand Prize in "The Republican" Contest Admired by Automobilists.

The Ford 1912 Model Torpedo Runabout, the grand prize in "The Republican" subscription campaign, arrived in Bellefonte from the factory last week Ever since that time the car has been the admiration of all who have called at the garage of William Keichline & Company where it is on exhibition. The automobile was purchased through the Keichline agency and by all who have seen it has been pronounced one of the nobbiest automobiles ever brought to Bellefonte. The car is of the type o that owned by W. Harrison Walker, in Bellefonte, and Dr. W. U. Irvin, at Unionville. Anybody desiring to see the car will be welcome at the Keichline garage, near the big spring.

The Ford Torpedo Runabout is the second highest price car manufactured by the Ford Company. The only difference between the Torpedo Runabout and the four-seated touring car is the body. The engine, running gear, etc., of the two cars mentioned is absolutely the same. The management of "The Republican" announces that should the winner of the Torpedo Runabout prefer a Ford four-seated touring car, this may be arranged by the payment of $85 additional to the Keichline garage. Manager Keichline has informed us that he will be very glad to make the exchange on that basis, which is the exact difference in the listed price of the two cars.

Track-Walkers' Records.

George A. Burns, the oldest track-walker in point of service on the Pennsylvania Railroad, has just put his 177,900th mile behind him. In keeping vigil over the track placed in his care, he has walked the equivalent of 7 1-3 times around the world in the last 35 years. Journeying four times a day between Greensburg, Pa., and Youngwood Yard, a distance of 3.53 miles, he has inspected 5,725,800 splice plates on half that many rail joints.

Other Pennsylvania track watchmen who have distance records are William Young, of Franklin, Pa., with 154,144 miles in 22 years and 8 months; Dennis Watters, Norristown, Pa., with 111,624 miles in 24 years; Simon Owens, Washington, D. C., with 135,626 miles in 23 years and 4 months; and Julius Hein of Edgewood, Md., who has covered 101,100 miles in 23 years and 3 months. These five men together have walked nearly a million miles.

Track inspection is reduced to an exact science on the Pennsylvania. A patrolman registers in the tower at the end of his beat the hour and minute of his arrival; departs on his journey and registers similarly in the tower at the other end. He carries a registering clock, by which his trips can be checked to the minute. His route usually covers about four miles, but is less than half this on stretches where special watchfulness is needed. At night the inspector has only the light of his lantern to work by, but he must see that every frog, switch and signal is in good order.

If a nearby tree looks dangerous, he must report, so that it can be chopped down. An overhanging rock may become loose—the track-walker must know about it in time to avert a possible accident. The wash of waters must be looked after. Road crossings must be examined for danger to teams as well as to trains.

Other things that demand his vigil are out-lying water stations, overhead wires and even the cattle loose in the fields. Some of these pedestrians are on the job every hour in the twenty-four to smooth the path for the hurrying millions gliding over the rails.

Saw Them Often.

"The proprietor of the circus discharged the snake charmer."

"Why?"

"Because he's a hard drinker, and as long as the snakes were around the grounds he couldn't tell which were hers and which were his.

A Queer Freak.

Milreau, who was said to have been connected with some of the best families in France and to have possessed considerable means until ruined by the Panama canal disaster, was one of the best friends the beggars of Paris ever had, and to obtain funds for helping them he became a systematic thief. He used to frequent the fashionable streets during the day and pick pockets, and by night, dressed in ragged clothes, he dispensed the spoils to the first beggars he met. For years he continued the practice without being suspected, and it was by pure chance that he eventually did fall into the hands of the police. When his lodgings were searched sufficiently empty purses were found to fill a large packing case, and it was made clear that he had stolen hundreds of watches and scarfpins, while he had been pinching and contriving to live a respectable man on a few francs a week saved from the ruin of his fortune.

The Literary Man.

When I get home where I live at I will remove my wife's new hat from my desk and my daughter's socks and my wee baby's building blocks, three spools of thread, some tatting frames, a box or two of cut out games, some scissors and my wife's new waists, a box of tacks and some tooth paste, a cookbook and a sewing kit, some letters that my wife has writ, some apple cores the kids put there, one or two wads of handmade hair, a bottle of shoe polish, too, a hairbrush and a baby shoe, some stockings that are worth a darn, a skein or two of darning yarn, a picture book or two or three, a picture babe has drawn for me, a rubber ball, a piece of gum, some picture postcards and a drum. I'll do all that when I get home and then write an immortal poem that will have Swinburne double crossed—if all my pencils are not lost.—Houston Post.

Wrecks and Cats and Dogs.

There is an odd provision in the English law on wrecks. It used to be that wrecks, like pretty nearly everything else, belonged to the king. Sometimes, if a vessel were only partly wrecked and it could be raised, an owner was averse to surrendering it, but it was generally seized for the king in accordance with the law until the question came up as to just what was a wreck. It was generally admitted that when all hands were lost that was a wreck, but as they wanted to get as narrow a definition as they could they got parliament to establish a law that in future nothing shall be considered a wreck out of which a cat or a dog escapes alive, and from that time until the present day no vessel coasts about England without carrying a cat or dog.

Canvas Currency.

Banknotes appear in much the same form throughout the world and have always done so except in China, where the earliest note was made of canvas, some six centuries before the Christian era. It was more like a tablecloth than a banknote, its length being about two meters, or six feet six inches. This form of note was not very convenient when large sums were concerned, so later the note was printed on parchment, and all other forms of money were suppressed. One emperor issued notes representing more than three thousand millions. But the money was never popular, and gradually the notes were retired.

Charlotte Cushman's Warning.

One icy night Charlotte Cushman and Lawrence Barrett came out of the theater together. The steps were dangerously slippery, and it was with difficulty that they kept their feet at all. As they totteringly descended the great actress said to her companion quite in her Lady Macbeth manner: "Take a good grip on my arm, Lawrence, and if I slip hold on like grim death. But if you slip in the name of heaven let go!"

Bad Manners.

The two women stopped in front of a dentist's showcase.

"There, mamma," said the younger woman, pointing, "I want a set just like that."

"Hush, my child!" commanded her mother. "Don't you know that it's vulgar to pick your teeth in the street?"

A Bright Youth.

She (archly)—Whom should you call the prettiest girl in the room? He (looking about him)—H'm! Well, to tell the truth, there isn't a pretty girl in the place.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution submitted to the citizens of this Commonwealth for their approval or rejection, by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Number One.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all writs shall be hadtumed in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court to which any suit shall be thus assigned shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

RESULTS THAT REMAIN

Are Appreciated by Bellefonte People

Thousands who suffer from backache and kidney complaint have tried one remedy after another, finding only temporary benefit. This is discouraging, but there is one special kidney medicine that cures permanently and there is plenty of proof right here in Bellefonte.

Here is the testimony of one who used Doan's Kidney Pills years ago, and now states that the cure was lasting.

Mrs. B. F. Dietrich, 391 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a good remedy and I do not hesitate one moment in confirming the public statement I gave in their praise in Oct. 1907. A member of my family complained a great deal of backache and headaches and I had heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. Their use effected a complete cure and also strengthened the kidneys. The benefit received has been permanent and I have thus been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills live up to representations."

His Intentions.

Trinidad's Pitch Lake.

All efforts to ascertain the depth of the famous pitch lake of Trinidad has been unsuccessful. At the sides of the lake the pitch is hard and cold, but at the center it is almost constantly boiling.

Patriotism.

In peace patriotism really consists only in this—that every one sweeps before his own door, minds his own business, also learns his own lesson, that it may be well with him in his own house.—Goethe.

The Usual Way.

Nodd—Awfully sorry to hear your house burned down. Did you save anything? Todd—Oh, yes! After some very lively work we succeeded in getting out all the things we didn't want.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove Cox, of Tyrone, are enjoying a week's visit with friends in Bellefonte and Milesburg.

Don't forget the lecture and moving pictures of the Johnstown flood, at Garman's Opera House today.

Mrs. Francis Atwood, who was a guest at the Beaver home for six weeks, returned to Philadelphia on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Mabus returned home on Monday after an enjoyable visit of one week with friends at Lewisburg.

Mrs. Lewis Ettinger and Mrs. Oscar Foust, of Milton, this week visit with their aunt, Mrs. E. S. Dorworth, on East High Street.

Quite a number of former Bellefonters are in town this week for the fair Among the number are Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cox, who now make their home at Reading.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Musser and son, of Altoona, arrived in Bellefonte on Monday morning and are visiting with Mr. Musser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Musser.

Clayt. Brown, Mrs. William Dawson, Mrs. Harvey Griffith and Mrs. Samuel H Williams on Thursday last week made a trip to Lock Haven and return in the Brown automobile.

Joseph Apt, Sr., who has been visiting for the last month with his daughter in Williamsport, returned on Monday and is again making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Robert Hood.

Frank Miller, who is located at Tyrone, is this week in charge of the Adams Express office in Bellefonte. Harry Taylor, the regular agent here, is enjoying a well earned vacation.

Merv. J. Betz, of Jacksonville, a Republican hustler and a good, all-around fellow, was greeting friends in town yesterday. Merv. says that the Republican ticket nominated on Saturday is a winner.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fowler and two children, of Pittsburg, are visiting with Mrs. Fowler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strunk, at Howard. They arrived on Saturday and will remain until tomorrow.

Mrs. James A. Beaver departed on Saturday for Lewistown, where she is spending the week. Miss Mary Orbison, who spent several weeks at the Beaver home here, has returned to Huntingdon. Judge Beaver is holding court at Philadelphia.

On Thursday, October 12, a public supper will be served in the Bush Arcade, the menu to include chicken and waffles prepared by the famous cooks of the A. M. E. church. Tickets, 35c. Ice cream, cake, etc., will also be sold. The holding of the supper is a part of a big effort to raise the salary of the pastor, Rev. P. E. Paul, who goes to conference on October 25. All are cordially invited to help.

Harry C. Valentine, superintendent at the Scotia mines, was stepping it off pretty lively on Saturday, last, making a quick trip to Scotia and return and arriving home several hours earlier than usual. It was quite apparent that something out of the ordinary was on foot and inquiry regarding his haste in returning home brought to light the fact that Saturday was the twenty-seventh anniversary of his wedding day. Just as gallant as gallant could be, Harry remarked as he was hurrying home: "Just twenty-seven years ago today I was married and, by George, it doesn't seem half that long to me."

William W. Waddle is the new clerk at the Brockerhoff House. Some time ago Harry Auman resigned and Landlord Horton S. Ray held the position open until he might place his hand upon the right man for the place. He naturally decided in favor of "Sheriff" Waddle and on Monday the latter entered upon his duties as chief dispenser of the glad hand and the merry smile. With "Phip" Waddle as right hand man at the Bush House and his brother "Bill" at the Brockerhoff House, the Waddles are bound to catch you coming or going. Incidentally the two hotels have two of the best men for the positions to be found anywhere.

We do not know just when we were so pleased as we were one day last week when Joe Barton, of Unionville, dropped into our office for a little chat. Our surprise and delight was due to the wonderful change in his appearance since he became chief clerk and time-keeper for the Western Maryland Railroad Company, with headquarters at Confluence. Joe looks just about ten years younger than he did before going with the Western Maryland. He has all the vim and vigor of the Joe Barton of old, and one needs but to look at him to know that he is taking the very best care of his health. He has a good position, stands well with his company and we confidently expect to see him rapidly advance until he is with the top-notchers in railroad construction work.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Thomas are entertaining a jolly house party at their home, near Stormstown. Their guests include Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bloomingdale and Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Daly, of Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Gates, of WilkesBarre. Mrs. Daly and Mrs. Gates are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. Mr. and Mrs. Bloomingdale are intimate friends of the Dalys and are enjoying their first visit to this section of the State. Mr. Bloomingdale is a noted magazine writer and author. In recent years he has opened an advertising and publicity agency in Philadelphia, meeting with considerable success. After taking in the fair this week the Dalys and Bloomingdales will return to Philadelphia in the big Daly touring car. Mrs. Daly is an expert driver and will be at the wheel on the trip to the city.

Mrs. Jennie R. Hastings and daughter, Sarah, are planning a trip abroad during November.

Miss Myra Humes entertained a few friends at dinner on Tuesday evening and also gave a luncheon on Wednesday.

Howard J. Miller and Miss Elizabeth Tate, both of Bellefonte, were married on Tuesday evening at the United Brethren church parsonage, Rev. C. W. Winey officiating.

On account of the Centre County fair this week, the regular meeting of the Woman's Civic Club, of Bellefonte, will be held on Saturday, October 14 instead of on Saturday, October 7.

Miss Msdelon Schiff, of New York, is the guest of Miss Nellie Conley and will remain the greater part of the winter. She and Miss Conley were room-mates at Birmingham. Miss Schiff has been studying in Brussels during the last two years.

FAIR DATES CHANGED

Wet Weather Changes Schedule to Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The hardest kind of luck in the way of weather was the best the Centre County fair could draw this week. That "it never rains but it pours" was never so provokingly illustrated, for everything was in readiness this week for what would undoubtedly have proved to be the largest and most successful fair conducted by the present management. The continued wet weather prevented the holding of races yesterday and formal announcement was made that the schedule of fair days had been changed from Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to Thursday, Friday and Saturday. All that is now needed is enough sun to dry out the grounds and track, and in this event the visiting crowd will witness probably the best card of races held in Bellefonte.

The exhibits at the fare are pronounced the finest ever displayed on the grounds. Thompson's wild west show is making good in the entertainment line. In fact, it seemed as if everything had rounded to so nicely that the fair would be a record-breaker, both in point of attendance and features, when along came the heavy rain of last Sunday and the frequent showers since that time. Even though the grounds were partly flooded by Sunday's all-day rain, the fair management quickly got busy and soon everything was nicely cleared up and the track drained off, when Tuesday night's showers necessitated much of the work being done over again. When it appeared yesterday that the rain didn't so much as know how to let up the management announced that the days for the fair would be shifted to today, Friday and Saturday.

Here's hoping the Weather Man is a jolly, good fellow and gives the fair management and the public a square deal during the next three days.

Wind-Up of Court.

Before adjournment last week the regular session of court disposed of a number of cases not reported in our last issue. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty in the case of the commonwealth vs. Theodore Williams, Maud Williams and Helen Wilson, charged with larceny. The case originated in Howard township.

John H. Messmer, of Gregg township, was found guilty of selling fourteen bottles of beer to a minor and was sentenced to twenty days in the county jail and to pay a fine of $50 and costs.

Edward Oswalt, Harry Smith, Daniel Rider, Dewey Stratton, Harry Rogers and Maurice Cartwright, who pleaded guilty to stealing wire from the Bell Telephone Company at Philipsburg, were placed in the charge of their parents, sentence being suspended.

Clyde Shutt, convicted of betrayal, was given the usual sentence.

The grand jury, in its report, recommended the rebuilding or repairing of three county bridges. One is over Spring creek, in Bellefonte; one in Gregg township, crossing Penn creek, and the third is the inter-county bridge at Osceola Mills.

COUNCIL IN SESSION

Brief Meeting Held to Consider Number of Routine Matters.

Bellefonte Council held a brief session on Monday evening, the meeting lasting long enough only to dispose of a number of routine matters. The Street Committee was authorized to lay a concrete sidewalk at the Benner property, adjoining the Brockerhoff House. The borough will pay the difference between the cost of a concrete sidewalk and what the Misses Benner had planned paying to have the old stone and brick sidewalk relaid. The relaying of the sidewalk has been made necessary by the changing of the grade at the time the diamond was paved with brick.

Council directed that North Allegheny Street, between Linn and Curtin, be rolled with a steam roller. The street was recently repaved with crushed stone. To make the improvement a more permanent one Council, on recommendation of the Street Committee, directed that the street be rolled. The cost is to not exceed $25.

The Street Committee was ordered to build a concrete crossing on Howard Street, at the intersection of Decatur alley, near the J. T. Sebring residence. Council directed that a sewer be built in South Allegheny Street, between Logan and Bishop Streets.

Burgess Bower, in his monthly report, reported fines and costs amounting to $22.50 collected and expenditures amounting to $8.50.

Mr. Grimm, of the Finance Committee, reported that he was unwilling to approve the bill for the printing of the borough statement, taking the ground that the borough auditors had no power to order the printing done. President Harper stated that the Finance Committee of Council, alone, had the power to order the printing done and the bill was, therefore, not recommended for payment.

On the Job.

"The Republican" was the only newspaper in Centre County to be on the job in giving the people the first election news. The counting of the vote cast at Saturday's primaries was not completed in many districts until 5'clock on Sunday morning. By Sunday evening returns had been received from 46 of the 61 districts in Centre County. On Monday morning "The Republican" issued a special edition, free to its subscribers, giving the complete ticket nominated by both Republican and Democratic parties. The special edition also contained the first definite news of the safety of Mr. and Mrs. John Smithgall and children and Harry Jodon, J. C. Burroughs and Elmer Stump, all of whom are Centre Countians residing at Austin, the scene of the terrible flood on Saturday.

Announcement was also made that despite the fact that the fair grounds were badly flooded by Sunday's rain, the fair would positively be held. Each item of news was up to the minute. Every regular reader of "The Republican" received a copy of the special edition and with no extra charge. It pays to be a regular reader of "The Republican."
